

Dr Lebegue is a retired Air Force flight surgeon and public health physician, with extensive experience in the interaction between the environment, workplace risks and health. His first job was a switchman for Erie Lackawanna RR, just before they went bankrupt. He swears it was not his fault! His last paying job was disability evaluator for WA Dept of Labor and Industries.

He was the Air Evac Validating flight surgeon for the middle east war in 2009. These days he is a strong advocate for sensible transport policy that keeps us all healthy: more passenger rail!
